

The European Crisis: Information and Proposals

The very serious situation of the present crisis it is not just a monetary matter. We must realize - although it seems incredible - that the monetary crisis is an instrument, the stronger and most prominent, among many other ones that were implemented to reach the final goal: to delete the European Nations from the political, economical and cultural world scenery, confining them in a small asphyxial corner of marginal survival. The mechanism, the previous history, and the 'secrets' of this operation are widely analyzed and explained in my book "La Dittatura Europea" (the European Dictatorship), which has just been published by Rizzoli. This is the reason why in the last times I was absent from the Italiani Liberi website, and I did not answer the e-mail: but I hope that you will understand and forgive me.

I recommend the book to my readers: it is a pamphlet of utter denunciation, a real Manifesto and declaration of battle, and until the very last days I was afraid it would not see the light. There you will find the story of all what I personally experienced during the long years of my war against the european unification; you will also find the names of those who betrayed Italy - from the politicians to the bankers - and also a proposal to the european governments to quit Maastricht before the final collapse of the Euro. Here I want to invite my readers to support this proposal in every possible way, by talking, writing, to do something to accomplish it for Italy, without waiting for the decisions of any other State.

We must nationalize the Bank of Italy and at the same time we must create our own currency - a sort of italeuro if we do not want to call it again "lira"; but it would be better to go back to the lira, since we still have the reference of the past exchange rates, which of course must be reviewed and adjusted to the present situation by the Minister of the Economy. Italian State Bonds should be traded only into the National Stock Exchange, and they should be bought only by italian citizens (as it is in China) so that speculators will not be able to seize them and pursue their failure. By doing so, State Bonds will not be prone to the rating agencies has it is happening today in Ireland, Greece and Portugal and so on. The Italians would certainly buy State Bonds with greater confidence, obtaining an interest rate that would be higher than the present and almost non-existent one. On the other hand, it is truly vexatious what is happening with the "loans" of the European Monetary Fund, that is asking an annual interest rate above 5%.

In short, we must separate the economic destiny of Italy from the catastrophic one of the other States of the European Union, which has been planned, programmed and pursued intentionally. Some people - not only Ida Magli - had foreseen this destiny from the very beginnings of the single currency; for example the director of the review Limes, Mr. Lucio Caracciolo, few months ago published an article "Where is going the Currency without State?". But his voice remained unheard, as already happened several years ago - before the birth of the Euro - when he published a polemic article titled "Euro No".

However, I go further beyond the assumptive mistakes of evaluation and I do know with absolute certainty - as I proved in "The European Dictatorship" - that the real goal was the complete failure and destruction of Europe - in all fields - even if the vast majority of its citizens could not slightly imagine it. We must withdraw from all the other rules of Maastricht, that are so dysfunctional that we must suppose that they have been invented by people who were completely out of their minds. One example: the "quotas", that is the amount of milk and fruit that we are allowed to produce. We have to throw in the garbage our surplus production of fruit and milk, and then we have to buy these same goods from others. Other States have to throw away into the sea almost all what they are fishing, in order to stay within their "quotas", and so on. At the same time, entire Peoples are dying of starvation.

We must put back Duty and Customs on the goods that are damaging us, as it was always done according to the wisdom coming from centuries of commercial exchanges. It makes no sense to hunt in every single Italian shop the goods coming from China, because they are counterfeit or dangerous: it is better to stop them out of our borders. We must immediately withdraw from the Schengen Treaty, we must restore our national borders: each State must have them, if it wants to be a sovereign State. With borders, we will avoid the migratory invasion and all the damages and absurd expenses that it is causing. In short we must go back to ourselves, to common sense, to reasonableness, and we must realize that during the construction of the European Union we have been governed by two groups of people: the few ones who are commanding the world - and are pursuing our destruction with rules that were purportedly devised - and a majority that obeyed to foolish orders, without realizing how foolish they were. If we want to have some small hope to save ourselves, we must go back to reason immediately, and maybe this will help other Peoples to save themselves.

Unfortunately there is no Party in Italy that ever made the slightest objection to the programs of the European unification - only the Lega in its first times; so we must not expect the politicians to do anything, unless they are forced to. We must find a way to pretend strongly and with clamor to do the most urgent thing: withdraw from the Euro. I do not know who is organizing the present protest against the reform of the University - a matter of very small importance compared to what we are talking about; but we should try to do something like that. Whoever is able to do so, please do it.
